

I have been an XM-subscriber for over 2 years. I listen to XM, AM and FM radio as well as my DVD's when the mood suits me. When traveling across country I enjoy FM for the consistency it provides in my listening pleasure. This is a service that I pay for and feel that the providers of Satellite Radio should be able to offer any and all services that the public wants and will pay for. I turned on what used to be one of my favorite country stations the other night and for 25 minutes did not hear one bit of country music - commercials and talk. They might try giving their audience something worth listening too rather than trying to stifle competition.

Progress is progress - to me this would be like the printers who print checks and post office trying to ban on-line banking. It might help them make money but I don't think it is in the best interest of anyone else.
